

Abstract

A process to treat water from pollutants by non-stabilized gas bubbles is claimed. Polluting agents are concentrated within thin top water layer and later removed from the treated water either with this top water layer or by a flocculation and further precipitation. The treatment process could go on a continuous basis and be productive. An Apparatus utilizing a water tower for the continuous treatment is claimed.